OPENING OF THE MISSISSIPPI. As the guerilla system of warfare on the Missheippi river has boon a favorite theme with us for the past twelve months, we feel that we canmot refer to it too aften or sentiane to urgo it tos carnesily, as the most effective means of blacksding the trade and commerce on that stream. This policy is beginning to attract the attention and challenge the approval of almost the entire press of the country, and we are especially gratified that the papers of Richmond have taken held of the subject and, in a fercible manner, are bringing it to the diffeet attention of the Government

The Whig, of the 16th inst., devotes a leader to this teple which we feel disposed to substitute this evening far any further remarks of our wwn. " If we could judge," says that paper, by an article which appeared same time ago in the London Times, the prevailing sentimen in Bagiard is, that the fall of Vicksburg and Part Hudson will involve the epening of the Mississippi to the commerce of the Northwest It would be well to disabute these people of this delusion by a practical test; and with that view we would suggest that a strict watch be kept upon the first steamer in transit with merchandise from above. The posting of a few guerilles at paints where the channel nears the river bank will accomplish the doom of the first adventurer, and yield in moral effect a recompasse fully estimate are with the fall of Vicksburg. It will, moreover, bring salutary conviction to the mines of the Northwest, who, doubtless, take the same view of the effeat of the fall of that strenghold as the puople of England. It will satisfy the people of that section of the irretrievable less to them of that great untilet atherwise than through the inalrumentality of peace with us. Europe and the Northwest alike would see the uttor fatulty of any attempt at a compulsory exaction of the this fact should by all means be given on the wary first attempt at the fereible navigation of easier of accomplishment.

It may be that the first few efforts by fraight stramers to descend the river might prove suc censful through the agency of Government conwave. But that would, of course, be no test The experiment would be rather prejudicial to the prespect of its future uninterrupted navigation than etherwise. For what trade would gremy's boats on the Misslesippi, etherwise the consent of our Government. The number the hearts of his brave garrison. of gunboats now at the command of the United evident, would be chimerical

What with regard to the practicability of a safe passage along the Mississippi of the enmy's freight boats without conver! As we have already intimated, there are various points along that part of the Mississippi lying within our territory where these heats would or neces sily be compelled to come within easy range of cessity for wooding at acremete intervals would be indispensable, and here they would lie cam along the Mississippi are as well defined as are the regular laudings, and of these our guarillas would of course have full knowl polys. Corving steamboats on the Missle sippi river take in at a time weed enough to being the ease, no one will doubt the temibility of lying in wait for them at those points, and injury, even if they were propored to inflict any This species of warfare would deunds the hoats of almost every man on board long before they of the Government. His duty is, not to makereached their destination, and they would they These are not groundless speculations. They are facts which are patent to the plainest compreheasien, and no reasoning mun can controver zione as te the progress and issue of great more asperficial awnings that cover the practieal, though subordinate detalls. It will not be presumed that the fall of Richmond would in wolve the subjugation of the South. The moral Sufficience of such a result abroad might be in inrious to our cause, it indeed we place any value upon the estimate of other powers of ou position in this war; but practically it would bring the anemy no mater the goal of his wicked ambition And neither does the fall of Vinksburg and Port Husson, while the moral indicance may becomed orable, advance the enemy on stee in the work of opening up the Mississippl to the fremavigation of the Narthwest. Heretofore unr attention was directed to the defense of a few prominent points, where stable fortifications had been communied to what the enemy from the free use of that great highway. Henceforth we ahalf harrass him from a thousand different points along the entire range of our territory kondering an that river. His troubles have jusbegun. Instead of directing his efforts to the reduction of a stranghold or two, he will have to give his attention to a thousand other points, if he entertains the slightest kope of consummating what has sest thus far millions upon milliens of dellars, and pyramids of dead in his vain efforts to accomplish.

At all svenis, the somer we let the Northwest in particular know how groundless a liops for the fracdom of the Mississippl, the fall of Vicks. hung and Port Hadson farnishes, the somer will they be led to make up their minds as to what counse they will pursue-whather to seek reconciliation with us and thus gain what the North falsely promises them, through the agency of bloody carnage and millions of dollars, or continue in hostile attitude toward us, and rejost the book which the treatherous Yan-Lee taught them to believe we had wilfully withheld. A people more infatnated, It would ple late the lides that our policy is to example white men led them on to deeds of death.

The movements in this section are exciting s little feeling. Many express fears as to the sult of an advance to Kome, or even as far as Atlanta, by the enemy; but it seems to us the ovision already made to prevent such a move, with the close proximity of General Buance's army, and the facilities he enjoys to transport roops to a convenient point at a moment's noce, renders this section comparatively safe from mere raiding force. We believe the enemy is aware of the state of things, and if he troubles Northwestern Georgia to any very great extent, t will be done by a large force, for the purpose if flanking and compelling the abandonment of he position on the Tennessee.
